Heatley to Sharks in 3-way deal: Report

NHL Although unconfirmed by officials Thursday night, ESPN.com reported that the Ottawa Senators have agreed to send Dany Heatley to the San Jose Sharks.

While the trade has been denied by Senators general manager Bryan Murray and Doug Wilson, general manager of the Sharks, there are reports that the 28-year-old forward was part of a three-team deal that will shuffle the Sharks' former captain Patrick Marleau to the Los Angeles Kings and Kings forwards Alexander Frolov and Jarret Stoll to the Senators in exchange for Heatley.

Mayor Larry O'Brien gets his feet wet at city hall Thursday in preparation for La Vendemmia's annual grape stomp later this month. The proceeds for this year's stomp – of which O'Brien is a participant – will go to lung care research and enable the Ottawa Regional Cancer Foundation to hire a newly graduated researcher for a year.

City eyes SmartBus system

Real-time transit tech costs $17M

TIM WIECLAWSKI
tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

A year from now, OC Transpo passengers could be hearing automated stop announcements in both official languages.

In buses, digital signs will display the next stop and alert riders to detours and external emergency events, such as Amber Alerts.

At transit stations, riders will be able to track their buses on digital maps with predicted arrival times updated every couple of seconds, based on GPS, an odometer and the scheduling system. Riders will also be able to access the information on their BlackBerrys and iPhones.

Alain Mercier

Produced by a U.S.-based transit technology company called Clever Devices, the SmartBus technology suite will be considered at the city's transit committee on Wednesday.

"We work in one of the most difficult technology environments in North America, which is in Manhattan," said Diane Ayers, vice-president of business development with Clever Devices, "so working here (there) should be no large technical issues."

Ayers said the only significant change between the system proposed for Ottawa and other cities is that the announcements had to be in two languages.

At $17 million, the SmartBus system is substantially more than the $6.72 million put aside in the 2008 budget for an automated announcement system.

"For what we already planned to spend, we're actually buying more features," said Transit Service general manager Alain Mercier. "We're buying the kitchen sink. Everything that has been developed in North America as a best practice, we could buy in one shot."

That packaging of services would explain why OC Transpo has been slow to implement stop-calling technology, said Mercier.

The system can also be equipped with SmartCards, Mercier said. The Ontario Fare Cards are expected to go online around 2011.

If purchased, the SmartBus technology would be on 90 per cent of OC Transpo's fleet by the end of 2010.

Mercier said compatibility issues prevented the system from being installed on some of the oldest buses, but those buses would be retired by 2016.

Thousands expected at Terry Fox Run

TRACEY TONG
tracey.tong@metronews.ca

FUNDRAISER It may have been about three decades ago, but Dave Stephens still remembers Terry Fox's cross-country run.

"I remember the hype, and how tragic it was when he had to call it off," said the Ottawa Terry Fox Run Committee member.

Whether they are old enough to remember Fox's run, or have learned about it at school, more than 4,000 people are expected to participate in the city's 29th annual Terry Fox Run for Cancer Research at Anniversary Park this Sunday.

Held in memory of a Canadian icon, the non-competitive, volunteer-organized run — which is accompanied by smaller runs in Orleans, Kanata, Manotick and Aylmer this month — is one of the largest of its kind in the country, and is expected to raise about $250,000, said Stephens. Recipients of the Terry Fox Foundation grants include the Ottawa Hospital Research Institute and the Ottawa Hospital Regional Cancer Centre.

"The money that gets raised on Colonel By Drive on Sunday comes right back, so there's a real connection to the city," said Stephens.

The event, which begins at 8:45 a.m. also includes live music, children's activities and a fundraising barbecue.

Participants can register and collect pledges at terryfoxrun.org.

Public servants set $20M United Way goal

TIM WIECLAWSKI
tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

There is a perception public service employees were insulated from the recent economic downturn, but Canada Revenue Service Commissioner and CEO William Baker knows that's not the case.

"We've got spouses. We're got kids, friends and neighbours who were affected," said Baker, chairman of this year's Government of Canada Workplace Charitable Campaign to benefit the United Way. "The public service has a really strong resolve to make sure that this campaign is a success."

The goal of this year's campaign, which launched Thursday, is to raise $20.5 million over the next 10 weeks. Traditionally, the GCWCC raises half the funds for the United Way's annual campaign.

Light rail lawsuit may cost city nearly $40M

tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

City council is meeting Friday to discuss a lawsuit from the cancellation of the previous light rail plan.

Mayor Larry O'Brien said he is hoping to have the matter wrapped up and put away "very, very quickly."

However, a settlement could cost nearly $40 million.

A PowerPoint slide of a potential settlement offer was left on the screen at the end of a closed city council session Wednesday evening reportedly offering $36.7 million.

On Thursday, O'Brien would not comment on the specific value or the details of the offer, saying only that the city was still negotiating.

"That's the businesslike, the honest, and the long-term way of dealing with problems," he said.

"We hope to settle negotiations soon." Coun. Alex Cullen

The cancellation of the plan was one of the first acts of the new council. This prompted a group led by Siemens Canada to sue the city for over $200 million combined.

"We hope to settle negotiations soon," said Bay Ward Coun. Alex Cullen. "I think it's in the interest of both parties to settle."

Don't expect a raise any time soon

Canadians hoping to get a big boost in their paycheques next year may be somewhat disappointed, a survey of employers by Hewitt Associates suggests. The human resources consulting firm said the average salary increase is projected to be 2.8 per cent nationally in 2010, an increase from 2.2 per cent in 2009, when many companies made major cuts to their salary budgets. On the lower end was Ontario, which is projected at a 2.6 per cent increase. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Iggy blasts 'real' Harper

Liberal leader says PM's comments show his true colours

Stephen Harper's rivals say his behind-closed-door musings about winning a majority, stamping out separatists and socialists, and keeping liberals out of the courts prove he's two-faced.

Liberal Leader Michael Ignatieff says videotaped comments that leaked out publicly Thursday show the true prime minister.

"There have always been two Harpers," Ignatieff told a news conference Thursday.

"The real Harper always comes out when he thinks he can't be heard."

He said the real Harper is disdainful of the social institutions Canadians hold dear, like the justice system, and disrespectful of other political parties.

Ignatieff also scoffed at the closed-door rallying cry for a majority. He said he's toured the country this summer and met jobless Canadians — who would "laugh in your face" if asked whether Harper deserves a majority.

He said it's no longer possible to work with a man so contemptuous of basic Canadian values, and reiterated his plan to bring down the Conservative government.

"(Harper's) already lost the confidence of the House once," Ignatieff said, referring to the attempted coalition takedown of the Tories last year. "He's about to lose it a second time."

For political reasons, Harper has for years avoided uttering his desire for a majority. But in a private partisan speech that has leaked out, he repeatedly discusses his desire to achieve one.

In the speech to fellow Tories, Harper also describes how their party has kept leftists from being appointed to public institutions — including the courts.

"Imagine how many left-wing ideologues they would be putting in the courts, federal institutions, agencies, the Senate? I should say, how many more, they would be putting in," Harper said.

Despite the characterization of Harper as two-faced, none of those private musings actually contradict anything the prime minister has ever said publicly.

He has simply avoided discussing them.

Flaherty says deficits to run longer than expected

BUDGET Finance Minister Jim Flaherty says Ottawa will run deficits for two years longer than originally forecast and the country will be in the red at least until 2015.

As well, he said the deficit for this year will be over $5 billion more than originally thought, moving up to a projected $55.9 billion from $50.2 billion.

Flaherty told an audience in Victoria that Canada is showing signs of a fragile economic recovery, but returning to balanced budgets will not be easy.

"It will require decisions of government that won't always be popular or pain-free," Flaherty said. "It will require a lot of saying 'no' to pet projects and special interests."

The federal deficit is projected to be down to $5.2 billion for the fiscal year 2014-2015. Finance officials say economic conditions are improving, but remain volatile, making accurate projections difficult.

In the medium term, they said, the economy is weaker than forecast and Canada can expect larger and longer deficits.

Flaherty said in his speech the uncertain economic times mean the Liberal Opposition's sabre rattling over an election is bad timing for the country.

Swine flu to peak in fall: Study

Flu Outbreak

BUDGET Swine flu is likely to reach its epidemic peak in Canada this fall, a full month before the country has vaccines to prevent it, a major new study shows.

Indeed, vaccines will come too late to stop H1N1's spread across North America this fall, according to the paper, published today in the journal Science.

Had a vaccine been available for mass inoculations this month, the virus' spread would have been no worse than a typical seasonal flu outbreak, the paper says.

But with large-scale vaccinations unlikely to begin until mid-November in Canada and mid-October in the United States, they will do little to protect millions of North Americans from infection, researchers say.

"If that (vaccine timetable) unfolds, we're not going to have much effect on transmission," says Ira Longini, a professor of biostatistics at the University of Washington.

Heckler congressman feels wrath of Twitter

Earlier this week, Joe Wilson was just another relatively obscure Republican U.S. congressman.

By Thursday, the South Carolina politician had become a cause celebre thanks to two words shouted angrily at Barack Obama during the president's address to Congress: "You lie!"

For Canadians accustomed to the bare-knuckled verbal brawling that goes on during Question Period, the continuing fallout from Wilson's outburst might seem puzzling. But since 1952, American presidents have called together joint sessions of Congress to address major national issues only 15 times. Rarely, if ever, has a president been heckled.

While Democrats booed during two of George W. Bush's addresses, Wilson's shouted allegation that Obama was lying about health-care reform was seen as particularly egregious.

Wilson's startling breach of congressional decorum, in fact, has angered Republicans and Democrats alike.

Arizona Senator John McCain called it "totally disrespectful."

"There is no place for it in that setting, or any other, and he should apologize for it immediately," he said.

Wilson apologized for his outburst late Wednesday night. Obama, for his part, said he accepted Wilson's apology. "I do think that, as I said last night, we have to get to the point where we can have a conversation about big important issues that matter to the American people without vitriol."

Wilson has become an Internet sensation as his name was among the top searches on Google on Thursday. The Twitter and Facebook reaction to his outburst was swift and ruthless. His Wikipedia page was locked Wednesday night after repeated attempts to vandalize it, and his website went offline as countless Twitter and Facebook users posted its URL and the politician's office phone number.

Iraqi reporter a shoe-in as a national celebrity

BAGHDAD The Iraqi television reporter who threw his shoes at former U.S. President George W. Bush in one of the more bizarre episodes of the Iraq war might use his new iconic status in Iraq to promote humanitarian causes, his family said.

The reporter, Muntadhar al-Zeidi, is to be released Monday after nine months in prison.

He will be greeted by a nation where many feel his act of protest encapsulated their own bitterness over the war and U.S. occupation.

Bush was unhurt in the incident but had to duck twice in a stunning moment captured on TV and replayed countless times.

Al-Zeidi, a 30-year-old bachelor who was a virtual unknown working for a minor TV network, now has undeniable star power and is contemplating his future.

"My understanding is that al-Zeidi might quit his work as a journalist because he is sure that he will be turned away or boycotted by government officials," his brother Dargham said.

"Rather, he told me he is interested in working in a humanitarian organization or becoming an activist for women's and orphans' rights." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pastor's 'hijack' riddle

How did a Bolivian pastor manage to slip through Cancun Airport security with a fake bomb in his luggage?

That's what Mexican investigators were trying to figure out Thursday.

They also were evaluating the pastor for possible mental illness.

Jose Flores, 44, pulled out the fake device, which he later described as a "a juice can ... with some little lights I attached," as the airplane was approaching Mexico City Wednesday.

It sparked an hour-long runway standoff.

The incident ended peacefully when armed police dramatically raided the plane.

The 103 passengers and seven crew members escaped unharmed.

Sudan caught with its pants down

GlobalView

Talk about shooting yourself in the foot. The Sudanese regime surely didn't reckon with the phenomenon of Lubna Hussein, the journalist arrested with 12 others in Khartoum in July and charged with "indecency" for wearing trousers in public.

Not only did she refuse the flogging sentence that 10 women accepted, she went to court to contest the charge, determined to show it has no basis in Islamic teaching.

The entire world was watching when a judge waived the flogging sentence Monday and ordered her to pay a $200 fine. But Hussein kicked the ball right back at the Khartoum government, refusing to pay the fine and choosing instead to spend a month in jail.

The Sudanese regime picked on the wrong woman. Despite her request to family and friends not to pay the fine on her behalf, the head of the Journalists Union — a member of the ruling party — paid the fine and Hussein was almost pushed out of prison — TV reports show her looking upset at being told to leave.

She said she didn't want to leave behind the almost 800 women who had no one to pay the fine for them.

Ponder that for a moment — the Sudanese authorities essentially ended up paying a fine for a ridiculous charge that they invented. Forget shooting yourself in the foot — they scored an own goal!

Just before Hussein was released, the UN human rights office said her conviction violated both the bill of rights in Sudan's interim constitution as well as international human rights treaties ratified by Sudan.

We know what Lubna Hussein did to expose the Sudanese regime's moral bankruptcy. What will the UN, for which Hussein used to work, do? She resigned from that job — which could have provided her immunity — to contest the charges.

It's about time the UN kicked out Sudan and other countries that so egregiously violate women's most basic rights in the name of "decency."

Ottawa remembers on 9/11 anniversary

UrbanCompass

Today's an anniversary, and I wish it wasn't. The 9/11 attackers struck eight years ago, but we felt it, too.

Ottawa, a capital, felt vulnerable.

Late-night talk shows went on hiatus because nobody knew what to say. There were no jokes, but absurdity was everywhere. Not only have we regained our sense of humour with time, but a sense of proportion.

On a recent flight, I read Ottawa writer Dan Gardner's Risk: The Science and Politics of Fear, which includes a comforting reminder to the nervous air traveller that he faces much greater risk of injury or death driving to the airport than he will on the airplane itself, and an excellent chapter exploring the understandable but overblown fears of terrorism after Sept. 11.

The dust jacket, however, features the title stacked in the shape of two towers with two airplanes hurtling towards them, so I removed it out of consideration to potentially anxious fellow travellers.

No such reflexive self-censorship from the apocalyptically curious chap in front of me, who was reading Dave Sliker's End Times Simplified, a biblical guide to the end of the world.

That innocent detail would have made me considerably more nervous in 2002.

Your guide to Ottawa's best

TRACEY TONG
tracey.tong@metronews.ca

New in town and need some help on finding your way around? Don't worry.

From where to buy books to where to go for a pint, Metro's got you covered.

Grabbing a slice of pizza is a given — but there are other affordable options available in Ottawa.

Best places to go drinking

1 Pub Italia, at 434 Preston St., features more than 200 beers from around the world.

2 Irene's Pub, at 885 Bank St., also has live music almost every night.

Where to eat out on a budget

1 Ahora Mexican Cuisine, at 307 Dalhousie St., offers authentic tacos, burritos and more for $4.25 to $12.75 per person.

2 Don't let the stylish exterior fool you — prices at Basmati, Innovative Indian Cuisine, at 373 Somerset St. W., start at around $6.

3 The Elgin Street Diner, at 74 Elgin St., features triple-decker sandwiches, milkshakes and poutine.

4 Light eater? Don't pay for huge portions. Pay for your food by weight at the Green Door Restaurant at 198 Main St.

5 Find specials downtown at Richtree Market Restaurant, located inside the Rideau Centre.

Where to get books on the cheap

1 The Book Market, which has five locations in Ottawa (374 Dalhousie St.; 2690 Alta Vista Dr.; 1534 Merivale Rd.; 1675 10th Line Rd.; and 3754 Richmond Rd.) is the largest chain of used bookstores in North America.

2 The Book Bazaar, at 417 Bank St., has both used and new books.

3 All Books, located at 327 Rideau St., has used books of every genre.

4 Haven Books, at 43 Seneca St., offers reasonably priced textbooks.

5 Singing Pebble Books, 202A Main St., has lots of bargains.

How to have fun in the city for $20 or less

1 Check out the latest exhibit at the National Gallery of Canada at 380 Sussex Dr. Admission into special exhibits is free with membership, or a nominal fee. Free after 5 p.m. on Thursdays.

2 This isn't your typical museum — take shelter on a cold rainy day at the Diefenbunker, Canada's Cold War Museum at 3911 Carp Rd.

3 Filled with natural artifacts, models and photographs, The Canadian Museum of Nature, at 240 McLeod St., is free on Saturdays before noon.

4 Spins and Needles Craft and DJ night mixes hip do-it-yourself projects with funky music spun in venues like bars and galleries. The cost is usually around $5. The next session is held on Sept. 17 at the National Gallery of Canada.

5 Don't wait for a Tuesday — catch a movie any day of the week and treat a friend to popcorn for well under $20. Individual tickets are under $5. The cinema is located inside the St. Laurent Shopping Centre.

Where to meet boys/girls

1 Check out an indoor cycling class at Cyclelogik, at 1111A Wellington St., and Cyclefit, at 101 Main St.

2 Get your interest to belay you during indoor rock climbing. Ottawa has two indoor rock gyms, including Coyote Rock Gym at 1737B St. Laurent Blvd. and Vertical Reality at 161 Middle St.

3 Get your adrenaline rushing with white water rafting, about an hour's drive from Ottawa. Gather a group of friends and join up with Wilderness Tours or Owl Rafting.

4 Laughter is an aphrodisiac. Check out a comedy show at Yuk Yuk's at the Capital Hill Hotel on Albert Street, or Absolute Comedy at 412 Preston St.

5 Run into the man or woman of your dreams on one of Ottawa's numerous bike paths. There are more than 170 kilometres in the national capital pathway system perfect for cycling, walking and running — more than enough to work off excess energy, get fit and meet friends.

Tips to make ends meet

tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

Sometimes making ends meet means you have to dig around a little. For instance, with so many people moving out of their apartments, now is a great time to get free furniture.

"A lot of people can't take tables and bookshelves and lamps," said University of Ottawa student Brooke Cameron. "They just leave them on the street. So if you're the first there, you take it."

With textbooks costing up to $140 per book, uOttawa student Teresa Branch-Smith offers this tip: "Buy them used, use them in the library or share."

Both Carleton University and uOttawa have student-run food banks were students can pick up supplies when the budget gets tight. To make that food last longer, fourth-year uOttawa student Julie Levionnois recommends pooling resources and making meals with friends.

Clothing is another item where shopping second-hand can pay off.

"When I go with my friends to Value Village, we spend $50 and come home with 10 things," said third-year uOttawa student Janet Barber.

Economy on the rebound: BoC

The Canadian economy is bouncing back from the recession stronger than previously believed, despite ongoing worries about the impact of a strong dollar, the Bank of Canada said Thursday, as it left interest rates untouched at the lowest level practicable.

In July, Bank of Canada governor Mark Carney appeared to go out on a limb in declaring the recession over — one of the first to do so — but now the bank says even Carney underestimated the rebound.

"Stimulative monetary and fiscal policies, improved financial conditions, firmer commodity prices, and a rebound in business and consumer confidence are supporting domestic demand growth in Canada," the bank said in a statement.

"Combined with recent information on inventory adjustments and automotive production, this suggests that GDP (gross domestic product) growth in the second half of 2009 could be stronger than the bank projected in July."

The strength will not impact interest rates, however. The bank said it will keep its key policy rate at the 0.25 per cent until at least next July.

Magna gets majority stake in Opel

AUTOMOTIVE General Motors said Thursday that Canada's Magna International Inc. and Russian lender Sberbank would take a majority stake in GM's European subsidiary Adam Opel GmbH, leaving GM with a minority stake that will enable it to keep developing vehicles with Opel. Key issues — including agreements with unions to cost reductions and a financing package from the German government — remain to be finalized, GM said.

The deal was cheered by German Chancellor Angela Merkel, who saw it as a jobs saver ahead of Sept. 27 national elections.

Spruce Meadows unequalled

Of all the outdoor venues for sport in Canada, the International Ring at Spruce Meadows, on the outskirts of Calgary, stands out as a diamond in the rough.

To many it is a revelation.

Spruce Meadows is an under-appreciated jewel where, since its opening in 1975, millions of people from around the world have flocked. Experts agree this venue has few, if any, equals on the face of the Earth.

The grounds at Spruce Meadows had their beginnings as a cattle feed lot more than 30 years ago, but steadily the place has blossomed into horse heaven and the final word in show jumping. It is the closest thing Canada can claim to baseball's iconic Wrigley Field in Chicago.

Toronto has historic Maple Leaf Gardens and the retractable roof at Rogers Centre. Montreal boasts the most expensive white elephant in the country in the Olympic Stadium. Edmonton's Commonwealth Stadium claims the greatest permanent seating capacity of more than 60,000 as well as real grass.

But Spruce Meadows is much more impressive.

Comprised of 360 acres including two indoor and six outdoor competition rings, it has stabling for 1,000 horses. The place stages three seasonal tournaments and each year attendance approaches and often exceeds 500,000. The record one-day total in the showcase International Ring is 65,000, recorded last September as the Olympic medallists from Canada returned home to take on their rivals at the Spruce Meadows Masters.

There is an immense clock tower flanked by sprawling grandstands and a giant natural grass bank where families rush to sit on blankets and watch the spectacular horses jump on the immaculate turf. The grass is always groomed to an emerald green in spite of the precocious foothills weather and luxuriates over the space of four full football fields in the shadow of the majestic Rockies.

"At Spruce Meadows it has always been about accessibility. Admission for the day is $5 per family and if you don't have the coin, they'll let you in free."

Spruce Meadows can take your breath away.

There is also a magic that goes beyond the competition it fosters. At Spruce Meadows it has always been about accessibility. Admission for the day is $5 per family and if you don't have the coin, they'll let you in free.

All of which makes the International Ring at Spruce Meadows a masterpiece stadium not to be missed.

Scott Russell is the Host of CBC Sports Weekend seen Saturday afternoons. He has covered professional and amateur sports including nine Olympic games and numerous world championships.

Coyotes' third option

Judge says there may no winner of auction

It turns out there's a surprise third option available to the judge charged with deciding the fate of the Phoenix Coyotes — and it probably won't be to the liking of either Gary Bettman or Jim Balsillie.

Judge Redfield T. Baum raised the possibility that he might not award the team to either the NHL or Balsillie's company PSE as a two-day auction for the bankrupt franchise began Thursday.

The revelation came early in the proceedings and sent a ripple through the courtroom. Jordan Kroop, a lawyer for former Coyotes majority owner Jerry Moyes, was speaking about the potential bids when he was interrupted by the judge.

"There is a third opportunity when we're done here — no sale," said Baum.

"Theoretically," Kroop responded.

"I think it's more than theoretical," said Baum. "You all ought to keep that in mind."

The exchange set an uncertain tone to an auction process that most observers believed would end with a new owner for the money-losing franchise. Evidently, that's no longer a certainty.

"I'm not going to predict (what might happen)," said Bettman. "We all heard him say it, we'll all have to see what happens."

The full-day hearing produced one final surprise just as it was ending, when the NHL's lawyers informed the judge that they don't wish to cross-examine Balsillie Friday morning. He and the commissioner had each been scheduled to take the stand.

There was no reason given for the sudden change in plans.

Nash's film project

DANIEL SQUIZZATO
for Metro Canada

With the Toronto International Film Festival getting underway, the city is full of budding filmmakers.

But only one is a two-time NBA Most Valuable Player — Victoria, B.C.'s Steve Nash.

"(Filmmaking is) something that I'm really passionate about," said Nash, 35, said on Thursday. "It gives me a creative outlet that I may not have when my basketball career is over."

While not part of TIFF, the Phoenix Suns point guard does have a film production company, Meathawk Productions, and several short films under his belt, including a popular viral video entitled Training Day.

He will also serve as a celebrity judge for the upcoming LG Life's Good FilmFest, which is open to submissions of five-minute films that express a positive, uplifting message.

That motif fits with Nash's current project — a documentary for ESPN about another Canadian sporting icon, Terry Fox.

"(Fox's story is) so important to our culture and our history," said Nash. "There's a great opportunity to tell a huge audience in the States that have either never heard of Terry Fox or have forgotten about him."

Nash said he hopes the film will encourage people to "get involved and give back and be part of the community."

But as he prepares to enter his 14th NBA season, how does Nash balance the different aspects of his life? The key, he says, is making the most of his athletic downtime.

"Instead of playing golf or just hanging out, I like to focus my energy on things that are productive and hopefully will create some longevity and opportunities for me once my basketball career is over."

So which would he rather win: An NBA championship or an Academy Award?

"Nothing against an Academy Award, but I've spent the better part of my life trying to (win an NBA title)," he said. "It'd be fun to realize that goal that I'm still chasing every day."

That would, of course, be the perfect Hollywood ending to Nash's storied basketball career.

Jennifer's Body, Whip It among upcoming offerings

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

Autumn is always the most varied movie season of the year.

From heart-tugging chick flicks like Jennifer Aniston's Love Happens (Sept. 18) to a Bruce Willis-led thriller called Surrogates (Sept. 25) and even festival films like Toronto's biopic opener Creation (Sept. 25), the fall provides something for just about anyone.

For that reason, multiplexes provide a great relief for those who need a break from days getting shorter, the imminent prospect of having to rake a lawn covered in leaves or filmgoers who simply crave a cinematic escape. Here's Metro's look at some promising movies you may want to watch out for this fall:

Fall Preview

JENNIFER'S BODY (SEPT. 18): Juno-scribe Diablo Cody penned this horror movie about a demonic, cannibalistic cheerleader (Megan Fox) who eats her way through school — and I'm not talking the cafeteria's meatloaf either.

FAME (SEPT. 25): A re-invention of the 1980 Oscar-winning film that centred on a group of young struggling dancers, this movie will "learn how to fly high" at the box-office.

ZOMBIELAND (OCT. 2): We need another zombie movie like the walking dead need massage therapy but this comedy about a rag-tag group of zombie-hunters should add a little levity to the genre.

COUPLES RETREAT (OCT. 9): Vince Vaughn leads this laugher about four couples engaged in group therapy at a resort. Now who doesn't like to giggle at dysfunctional marriages when they're not your own?

WHIP IT (OCT. 9): Drew Barrymore makes her directorial-debut with this comedy about a Texas teen (Ellen Page) that turns to the rugged world of roller derby.

THE ROAD (OCT. 16): This bleak, post-apocalyptic drama starring Viggo Mortensen should perk the interest of the throngs who've read Cormac McCarthy's popular Pulitzer Prize-winning book.

AMELIA (OCT. 23): Shot in Winnipeg and Halifax, Hilary Swank stars as 1930's aviation pioneer Amelia Earhart whose mysterious disappearance is still unsolved. Oops, I may have just spoiled the ending.

THIS IS IT (OCT. 23): The now infamous film patchworks the last days of pop star Michael Jackson and his rehearsals for the 50-date concert that was not to be.

DISNEY'S A CHRISTMAS CAROL (NOV. 6): Robert Zemeckis (The Polar Express) utilizes groundbreaking 3-D animation to re-imagine the Charles Dickens classic that annually announces the beginning of winter and sadly, the end of autumn.

Whiteout comes off cold

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

REVIEW If anyone was worried they weren't going to get to see enough of Kate Beckinsale in her new Antarctica-set thriller Whiteout, fear not.

Sub-zero temperatures or not, the filmmakers still shamelessly work in a steamy shower scene for their star, complete with a detailed account of her stripping out of her clothes — though this could pass for exposition, since now we know exactly how many layers are needed to keep warm down there.

So fans of Beckinsale's more revealing work — in, say, Underworld — have been satisfied.

But what about viewers looking for a good, taut thriller to wrap their minds around? Look elsewhere. While Whiteout isn't bad by any stretch of the imagination, it is wholly unsatisfying, both technically proficient and incredibly boring.

In short, while a U.S. marshal (Beckinsale) waits out the last hours of her self-imposed exile at a post at the South Pole, the icy continent plays host to purportedly its first homicide, threatening our heroine's hopes for making a flight to warmer climates along with her safety.

But aside from a thrilling prologue set 50 years earlier and an impressively frightening encounter early on with the axe-wielding masked killer, there's little in this thriller that thrills.

It also doesn't help that, despite several overbearing flashbacks spelling out her troubled past, Beckinsale's character is kind of a wash on screen. More than anything, she just comes off cold.

Good girls gone blood

Getting covered in gore was a blast: Audrina Patridge

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

Actress and television personality Audrina Patridge understands the volatile dynamic that often evolves around young women whose social lives are too tightly linked.

Her MTV reality show The Hills charted the behaviours between her and a group of Los Angeles women and was a smash hit.

Her latest offering, the horror thriller Sorority Row, treads similar ground and many people get smashed and hit, not to mention bludgeoned, hacked, stabbed...

The film — a loose remake of the 1983 slasher opus The House on Sorority Row — stars Patridge as one of a gaggle of college girls (including Rumer Willis, Leah Pipes and Briana Evigan) whose prank gone wrong results in mass murder and cheesecake terror.

Although not prescreened for critics in its entirety, (the first 20 minutes were revealed to a select few earlier this year), the picture appears to be a high gloss, exploitation quickie with Patridge — although her turn is brief — exhibiting a surprising amount of dramatic, on-the-throes-of-death chops.

Yes, it's no secret that the comely starlet is the first to go… and graphically so.

"There is so much blood, it's awesome," says Patridge about her messy but pivotal part. "I've loved horror movies all of my life and I was so excited to do it and get covered in all that gore. It was so sticky and cold and crazy nasty. I had a blast."

Although the plot of Sorority Row sees the aforementioned damsels turn on each other as tensions mount and bodies pile-up, Patridge claims their of screen dynamic was anything but vicious.

"We all bonded really quickly and became really close. In the movie, not so much but in reality our chemistry was fantastic and we're still all really good friends."

Earlier this year, Patridge announced that she was leaving The Hills to pursue her own reality program called, appropriately, The Audrina Show.

But although Sorority Row is only her second feature film (the first being 2008's Into the Blue 2), the actress doesn't want to only be known as a TV star and hopes to continue exploring her new muse.

"I'd really love to do a period film," she admits. "I'm obsessed with The Tudors. I would go insane if I could that wear those elegant, feminine costumes and enter another time and place."

Sorority Row opens in theatres today

Mass murder and mayhem ensue when a prank by a gaggle of college girls goes horribly wrong in Sorority Row.

Who's afraid of frostbite?

InFocus

Richard Crouse

metronews.ca/infocus

30 Days of Night is one of several horror movies set in polar regions.

Walking down Dundas Street in Toronto on a recent warm September night I was surprised to turn the corner and see a snow bank stretching an entire city block. Fighting the urge to run home and unpack my parka I continued on to discover the snow was only a promotional gimmick for the movie Whiteout, a horror film set in Antarctica and opening this weekend.

Anyone who has ever lost their mittens on Halifax's Citadel Hill on a chilly January morning knows the terror of hypothermia but filmmakers have often used the cold as a backdrop for horror of a different kind.

Director Larry Fessenden set his global warming horror film The Last Winter in frosty Alaska although the film was shot in both Sarah Palin's stomping ground and Iceland.

"Pure white nothingness," one character calls it. "It looks like the last place on Earth." The last place on earth you want to be, that is, when Mother Nature starts unleashing her evil spirits on the people who want to steal her bounty. Drill for oil, the movie suggests, and the cold will be the least of your problems.

Based on the 1938 story Who Goes There by John W. Campbell, The Thing has been directly adapted for the screen twice and it has in part inspired other classics like Invasion of the Body Snatchers and Alien.

The story in John Carpenter's 1982 version begins with an E.T. who crashlands on Earth and get buried under layers of Antarctic ice. Years later the creature is discovered by modern scientists who also find that it assumes the appearance of the people that it kills.

Finally 30 Days of Night is a vampire tale set in a town near the Arctic Circle where it goes dark for thirty days a year. It's a cool concept and the wintry remoteness of the town adds a new layer to the usual vampire story.

Richard Crouse's Movie Show can be seen every Sunday at 6:30 p.m. on the E! Channel; mrchaos33@hotmail.com.

Hader, Faris dig into Meatballs voiceover

HEIDI PATALANO
for Metro Canada

FEATURE "My relationship with food is very neutral. We're just friends," says SNL comedian Bill Hader, while doing press for 3-D animated feature Cloudy With a Chance of Meatballs.

Hader voices Flint Lockwood, a crackpot inventor who makes it rain cheeseburgers and pea soup for the local citizens of Chewandswallow, who suffered for years with only anchovies to eat.

Though the film, based on a children's storybook of the same name, focuses on the town's growing dilemma of this unstoppable raining food, Hader and co-star Anna Faris say that what they loved most about the film was it's celebration of geek-dom.

"It's kind of a cool moment when you realize that that can be attractive to somebody, that being yourself is kinda good," says Hader. "I remember the first time I met my wife, I went to her apartment and she had Star Wars curtains. I said, 'I am going to marry you.'"

"Bill and I are both geeks," Faris says, before Hader swiftly reminds her to speak for herself. But Faris persists, "I used to wear a Christmas tree skirt as a cape and now I feel cool enough to talk about it."

Doing the animated film was a challenge for both comedic actors, who thought they were in for an easy ride.

"It's the hardest job that I've ever had," says Hader. "It's such a unique challenge to try to channel everything into your voice. You say the same line three times in a row, talk about it and do it again."

Terra Incognita is the fourth album from movie star turned singer-songwriter Juliette Lewis.

Crossover star

Juliette Lewis focuses on career in music

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

The majority of people know Juliette Lewis as an accomplished actress — she starred in Natural Born Killers among other films — but these days she wants to be recognized for another career — music.

With Lewis' new album, Terra Incognita, the movie star has seemingly crossed the threshold from musician-wanabee into bona fide artist; she's barely an actor now. At least that's how she looks at it.

"Music has been my whole life," she says on the phone from Philadelphia. "I hadn't done a movie in four years until recently. I'm much more involved in my music."

The change from screen siren to songwriter didn't come over night — this is Lewis' fourth record (and first without backing band The Licks), but only now does it actually appear as if she's a real musician.

A big reason for that is her new sound. The frantic rockers, which always seemed a bit too thrown together, are gone. In their place are far more polished sounds. There are still plenty of distorted guitars and upbeat tracks, but there's also Janis Joplin-like blues (Ghosts) and the David Bowie sounding Suicide Dive Bombers.

Lewis is well aware of the new musical direction; she says this album marks the first time she's ever really paid attention to songwriting.

"My first agenda was all about the live show," she explains. "But now I real feel like I've come into my own musically. I never cared if people knew me from my films, or if they thought they'd be seeing a joke. Whatever got them in the room and I'd give people a really exciting live show.

"When I came off the road I had a moment to reflect and say holy s I did it," she continues. "I'm now good for more than a handful of tickets all over the world, so that means I can really lock in and make a record full of feeling, something more vulnerable than ever and people will still show up."

There's no doubt that Terra Incognita has more feeling. On the aggressive Fantasy Bar she lambastes Hollywood life; the title track sees her singing about a failed relationship. And while it's still unclear just how this fresh direction will work for her, at least she tried something new.

"I really wanted to challenge myself," she says. "Terra Incognita is a Latin phrase for unknown territory and that's where I wanted to go musically, physically and emotionally. It's a metaphor for the journey I am about to take."

Common touch

Reba McEntire reflects on acting and music

GRAHAM ROCKINGHAM
for Metro Canada

Reba McEntire is set to perform Sunday night at the Canadian Country Music Awards from GM Place in Vancouver.

Reba McEntire is one of the biggest stars in country music. Records, tours, movies, Broadway shows and a popular TV series have made her wealthy beyond most people's imagination.

But she's never lost the common touch that made her so popular.

"As my sister says, 'Reba's just like everybody else,'" McEntire says in an interview from her Nashville home. "'She just happens to sing better than a few.'"

That common touch is felt all over the 13 tracks on Keep On Loving You, McEntire's first solo album in six years.

The current hit single, Consider Me Gone, is a plain-talkin' girl power song with a simple message — treat me right or I'm outta here.

There's also Eight Crazy Hours (In the Story of Love) about a mom escaping to a cheap motel for a day to get away from an impending nervous breakdown.

"She can't cope with it anymore," McEntire, a native of Oklahoma, explains. "So she goes away by herself, deals with it and comes back, picks up a bucket of chicken, the kids from school and she's back at home ... I think everyone has those kind of days."

McEntire is now 54 (a rare co-write on the album is called She's Turning 50 Today), her son is 19 and off to college, and she's raring to get back on the touring circuit again.

She's starting off gently, with an appearance Sunday night on Canadian Country Music Awards, broadcast live at 8 p.m. from Vancouver's GM Place.

"Canada has always been very, very good to me since the early '80s when we started touring up there," McEntire says.

In the new year, it's back to the big arenas, places McEntire ruled during the '80s and '90s.

McEntire admits that's a place she hasn't been for a while. Her career has been dominated most of the past few years by her successful TV sitcom, Reba, which ran for six seasons before being suddenly cancelled in 2007. McEntire, who never trained as an actor, says she's hoping for another shot at TV.

"It's on reruns four times a day, seven days a week," she says about her show. "So a lot of people don't even know that we stopped filming."

Cuff the Duke mellow out

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

Way Down Here is the fourth album from Cuff the Duke.

For most bands, recording in a secluded Ontario cottage would be a dream come true, but for Cuff the Duke it was a frightening experience.

"It was completely petrifying," says Wayne Petti, lead singer of the Toronto-based alt-country foursome. "We were in the middle of a farm in heart of winter, there were several storms and we were like what the hell are we doing, we can't record mono drums the whole way!"

As you may have inferred, it wasn't actually the relaxing cabin, which belongs to Blue Rodeo's Greg Keelor that scared the band, it was the way they created their fourth album Way Down Here. Instead of recording each instrument, layering it with other sounds and meticulously plotting each song like they would in the past, they made this record in 13 days and without previously working on any tracks.

"None of us had heard each other's songs," says Petti. "I'd show a song in the morning, then we'd talk about it and arrange it. Greg (Keelor, the disc's producer) would come downstairs and he'd say play me the track. He'd give us suggestions if he had any, then we'd go upstairs and lay it down."

While the band found the experience a bit bewildering, it was also the freest they've felt in a long time.

Fortunately, the new approach worked. Way Down Here is easily the band's best album since their 2002 debut. It's also their quietest disc, with their songs sounding more like laid back CSNY than the rollicking country pop they've mastered in the past.

The softer sound wasn't planned. If anything, Petti thought the band's last disc was their mellow record.

"I thought Sidelines of the City was a chilled-out album," he says. "I was playing a ton of acoustic on it, but people said it was a real rocker.

"With this we just went with what came naturally. It was first thought best thought and we didn't overanalyze anything."

The British obsession

SoundCheck
Alan Cross
metronews.ca/soundcheck

"Everywhere I went, I thought the same thing: God, the British love music. I'll even go so far as to say that Britons may love rock and pop more than any other nation on the planet."

During a frantic 35-hour music mission to the U.K. last weekend, I stole some time to do some record shopping: Oxford Street (the flagship HMV), Berwick Street (Sister Ray and a few others) and in the East End (Rough Trade on Brick Lane). Everywhere I went, I thought the same thing: God, the British love music. I'll even go so far as to say that Britons may love rock and pop more than any other nation on the planet.

All the record stores I visited were filled with so many CDs, vinyl records, DVDs, books, magazines and t-shirts that I became disoriented. The aisles were crammed with people actually buying things. The line at the HMV check-out snaked around itself three times. Meanwhile, back in the stacks, strangers debated and argued with each other while simultaneously offering recommendations and suggestions.

How can a nation of 60 million people support so many excellent music magazines? Q, Mojo, Record Collector, Kerrang, Uncut, Word, Classic Rock, the NME — the list goes on. Canada, even with our fierce musical nationalism, can't support even one printed music mag.

There are the endless summer festivals (Glastonbury, Leeds, Reading, T in the Park, V-Fest, Bestival, Latitude, Download and more). The BBC remains a powerful and popular musical force. And while they support music made by their own, the British often embrace foreign bands before they find any love at home (Pixies, Nirvana, The Killers, Kings of Leon, Gossip.)

Why are the people of this rainy island in the North Atlantic so passionate about music? Could it be the tradition of the arts that extends back beyond Chaucer? Maybe it's because so many people are packed onto such a small island. It might be the class system where music has long offered the promise of escape from dreary council estates. There's the British art school system where creative types can park themselves for a few years after high school. Or maybe as the nation that gave the world The Beatles, The Rolling Stones and Led Zeppelin, the British just get it more than we do.

At Heathrow, I carried six kilograms of Sunday papers onto my return flight, each one featuring its own spin on the British music scene. By the time we cleared the Irish coast, I had already made plans to return.

"I didn't think I'd do it after last year but I am," shrugs lascivious comedian, actor and self-proclaimed S&M Willy Wonka Russell Brand regarding his hosting of this year's MTV Video Music Awards (VMAs), airing live from New York's Radio City Music Hall this Sunday.

The VMAs will air on MuchMusic this Sunday at 9 p.m.

"(The producers) did say straight after, 'Do you want to do it next year,' and I went, 'Yeah, alright. I sort of agreed immediately after."

Brand's reappearance as VMAs master of ceremonies is a shock not only to the masses but to the 34 year-old Brit himself. While overseeing the event last year, his controversial quips about the likes of then-president George W. Bush, Britney Spears and cherubic musicians The Jonas Brothers garnered everything from guffaws to dropped jaws and even death threats.

Regardless, ratings shot up like a rocket. The vaguely familiar comic became an instant hit for both his humour and ability to wrangle 'em in via lambasting key Americana figures and causing quite the embroilment.

"It doesn't take much, does it? Bloody hell," he grunts. "I was saying things that were completely daft. There were some good things in there too but it's all just jokes. I'm only mucking about. These are not serious views; I'm not trying to push this through Parliament. But this year, they haven't said anything is taboo…just the usual stuff like not getting people to march onto the street and overthrow the government or promote Communism."

Brand's presence this year is already causing a whirlwind of activity. So, who exactly is Brand looking to poke fun at?

"If you drop the words 'fun' and 'at,' then Lady Gaga," he admits. "I've got more than words for her. I'm rather interested in that individual. Overall though, it doesn't do to get negative about people. It ends up making you feel bad."

Weeds takes a dangerous path

Justin Kirks discusses season five of the pot-dealing drama-comedy

IAN JOHNSTON
for Metro Canada

Playing a pot dealer on TV, you assume Justin Kirk must frequently get asked his opinion on the social and political issues of the marijuana debate.

Well, not really...

"Oh it comes up," laughs Kirk, who plays Andy Botwin on Weeds, which begins its fifth season on Showcase on Sunday.

"But the discussion goes more like — hey man, wanna smoke? Yes, I'll smoke with you."

Not that the quirky Weeds takes its title topic completely lightly. The show — which focuses on the misadventures of suburban mom-turned-dealer Nancy (Mary-Louise Parker) and her extended family — never quite gets away from the darker ramifications of the dope business.

The fifth season of Weeds begins Sunday night on Showcase

Though its central characters are pretty likable, their experiences in the weed business are not always positive.

"Well, it's not a public service announcement," says Kirk who, besides Weeds, is best known for his work on the epic play-turned-miniseries Angels In America.

"So there's no real position (on marijuana). I think when you start with my character and Kevin Nealon (as perennially-wasted neighbor Doug Wilson), how positive can it be? But it's a great place to start off from."

Kirk says the new season will take the show on a much more dangerous path as a pregnant Nancy finds herself involved with ruthless Tijuana mayor/drug lord Reyes (Demian Bichir), who also happens to be the father of her child. Reyes can't quite decide if, or when, he should kill Nancy.

"We're going way beyond where we've been. We're going from selling dime bags to getting involved with a very dangerous drug kingpin."

Weeds actors Justin Kirk and Mary-Louise Parker.

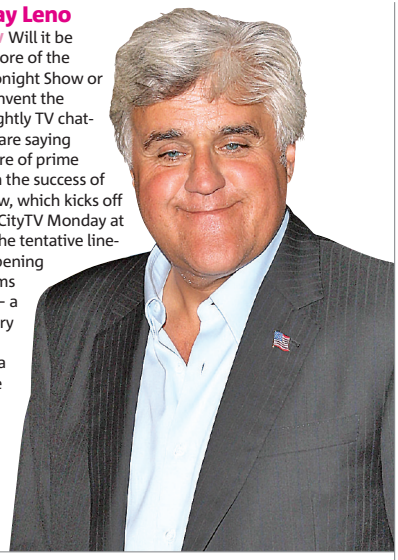
Metro's 7th Heaven: Metro taps what's hot right now

1 Jay Leno
TV Will it be more of the Tonight Show or will Leno reinvent the wheel for nightly TV chatter? Pundits are saying that the future of prime time rests on the success of the new show, which kicks off on NBC and CityTV Monday at 10 p.m. ET. The tentative line-up for the opening episode seems impressive — a chat with Jerry Seinfeld followed by a performance by Rihanna, Jay-Z and Kanye West.

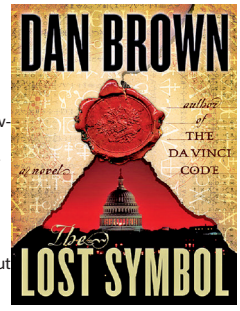


2 The 2009 MTV Video Music Awards
SHOW MTV is no longer the arbiter of culture it used to be but you can count on the music/reality show channel to put up quite the spectacle. British funnyman Russell Brand returns as host and Janet Jackson is scheduled to open the show with a tribute to his departed brother. Viewers will also get a first peek at the trailer for the Michael Jackson documentary This Is It. The Awards airs Sunday on MuchMusic at 9 p.m. ET.

3 Mi Plan: Nelly Furtado
ALBUM Her plan worked all right. The Portuguese-Canadian songstress not only pulled off an entire album in Spanish but made history last week when she became the first North American artist to land a No. 1 spot on the Latin pop charts with an original Spanish song — Manos Al Aire. Mi Plan's out Tuesday.

4 Monsters of Folk
BAND You could call them the new CSNY. Indie stalwarts M. Ward, Jim James (of My Morning Jacket), Conor Oberst (of Bright Eyes) and Mike Mogis have joined forces and are getting ready to launch a tour and their first album. Hipster hysteria, fanned by a series of teaser videos, has already reached fever pitch.

5 The Lost Symbol: Dan Brown
BOOK Literary blockbusters don't get bigger than this. Brown's fifth novel will touch down bookstores Tuesday and we can already hear the rumble of cash registers. Advance orders have made it a top seller on many booklists, backed by a Twitter campaign that pumped out clues and trivia about the author of The Da Vinci Code.



6 America's Got Talent Finalists
PEOPLE It's down to the last five: A contorting breakdancer from Oregon, an opera singer from Texas, a percussive quartet from New Hampshire, a baritone singer from California and a singer-guitarist from Maryland. Each of them will offer their final performances on Monday's episode and their fate will be decided on Wednesday's season finale in the presence of none other than Susan Boyle.

7 iTunes LP
TECH For those who lament the death of the album in the MP3 era, there's good news ... well, sort of. Apple's music download site will now have a new LP feature, which will allow people to access liner notes, artwork, lyrics and other music paraphernalia when they purchase an entire album.

Eddie's other, other woman?

GETTING AROUND Eddie Cibrian has been exposed as a serial cheater by a model who says he was dating her behind his wife's and mistress Leann Rimes' backs, femalefirst.co.uk alleges.

Scheana Marie Jancan has sensationally claimed she was part of a love square, which ended the TV star's marriage to Brandi Glanville — and she's still in shock about the whole thing, the website reports.

Jancan tells Life & Style magazine she and Cibrian were romantically involved for three years during his marriage, but she had no idea he was cheating on her with country star and actress Rimes.

Rimes and Cibrian initially denied reports they were an item after surveillance cameras caught them enjoying an intimate night out together, but Rimes and Cibrian, who played lovers on TV movie Northern Lights, have since ended their marriages and gone public with their romance.

A jilted Jancan has warned Rimes to be careful — because she's sure her ex-lover will cheat again.

She told the publication, "Eddie's with LeAnn now, but it's just a fling. Eddie cheated on Brandi. He cheated on me. He's going to do it to LeAnn."

Charlie's 9/11 theory

IDEAS Actor Charlie Sheen has a serious bone to pick with 9/11 and what most people think was behind it, popeater.com reports.

He's demanded a meeting with U.S. President Barack Obama to discuss his views. Sheen, who believes that the Sept. 11 terror attacks were carried out by the U.S. government, gave an interview to prisonplanet.com in the form of a fictional conversation he'd like to have with Obama.

In it, Sheen declared that "the official 9/11 story is a fraud," and was used as a "pretext for the systematic dismantling of our Constitution and Bill of Rights."

He went on to say that former U.S. president George Bush used the attacks as a way to create a war with Iraq.

SARAH POMPER

Ginger Garlic Chicken Stir Fry

Submitted by Alison Glasbergen, Victoria, B.C.

INGREDIENTS:
1 cup Jasmine rice
2 cups water
FOR MARINADE:
2 garlic cloves, crushed
3 inch piece of ginger, peeled and grated
1 tbsp soy sauce
2 tsp sesame oil
FOR STIR FRY:
1 tbsp vegetable oil
2 boneless, skinless chicken breasts, sliced into strips (or 4 boneless, skinless chicken thighs)
1-2 carrots, sliced
1 small head of broccoli, cut into bite-size florets
1 small package sugar snap peas, ends removed
4-5 mushrooms, sliced
1/2 green pepper, chunked
(other vegetables can be substituted or added)
METHOD:
1. Cook Jasmine rice according to package directions. Meanwhile, combine ingredients for marinade in a medium bowl.
2. Add sliced chicken, stir to combine and set aside while preparing vegetables.
3. Heat vegetable oil in large frying pan, add chicken, and stir-fry until chicken is no longer pink (about 2 minutes). Remove chicken from frying pan to a separate dish and keep warm in the oven.
4. Add a bit more oil to pan and add chopped vegetables, reserving mushrooms, and stir-fry for about 4-5 minutes.
5. Add mushrooms and continue stir-frying for another 3 minutes. Add a few drops of water to help vegetables steam cook when stir-frying.
6. When vegetables are crisp tender, add chicken and stir to combine (if desired, add a splash or two of soy sauce, then stir).
7. Serve with rice. Enjoy!

ARIES ♈
MARCH 21-APRIL 20
You are about to discover what has really been going on behind the scenes. Chances are it won't be as bad as you feared.

TAURUS ♉
APRIL 21-MAY 21
With Pluto, planet of power, now coming to the end of its retrograde phase your energy will soon return.

GEMINI ♊
MAY 22-JUNE 21
Today's cosmic alignment will bring you into conflict with some of the people you care most about in the world.

CANCER ♋
JUNE 22-JULY 22
Pressures have been building up around you for a long time now and at some stage today they will become almost unbearable.

LEO ♌
JULY 23-AUG 23
You can be astonishingly stubborn at times and chances are you won't give way on anything today, no matter how small or inconsequential.

VIRGO ♍
AUG 24-SEPT 22
No amount of discussion is going to win others round to your way of thinking, so all you can do is fight for what you believe.

LIBRA ♎
SEPT 23-OCT 23
You should know by now that different people see things in different ways and if you accept that fact you won't have too many problems.

SCORPIO ♏
OCT 24-NOV 22
Keep a sense of perspective today, especially where money matters and business issues are concerned.

SAGITTARIUS ♐
NOV 23-DEC 21
You may be feeling assertive and ambitious today but don't push it too far or you could turn people against you.

CAPRICORN ♑
DEC 22-JAN 20
As Pluto, planet of transformation, turns direct in your sign you will be asking yourself some serious questions, like "What does it all mean?"

AQUARIUS ♒
JAN 21-FEB 18
You may be tempted to go back on a promise but if you do you will regret it by the end of the month.

PISCES ♓
FEB 19-MARCH 20
Something will happen today that shocks you, but looking back you will realize that you should have seen it coming.
